

Anna Drygalo

Supervisor: S.V. Gordiychuk, candidate of natural sciences

Nursing Institute, Chair of Nursing

Language tutor: N.V. Shugonska, candidate of pedagogical sciences Zhytomyr

Training of professional competence of nurses while studying core subjects

The problem of medical workers gets more actual nowadays that is determined by constant transformation of social experience, reconstruction of medical service sphere, the development of new technologies. This causes the rise of requirements to medical workers and the appropriate level of their professional competence.

Based on the analysis of psychological and pedagogical works on professional competence training of nurses we can state that the definition of the theoretical and practical requirements of the forming of the professional competence is an urgent scientific research direction. The notion “professional competence of nurses” that is considered as its integral professional characteristics is realized in nursing process and includes the mastering of personal, professional and instrumental competences during the studying of core subjects . Professional activity of modern nurses is connected to nursing process that requires mastering of key personal, professional and instrumental competences of appropriate level of professional competence regarding individual solving of professional tasks and problems.

The forming of professional competence of nurses is one of the important aspects of the system of professional nurse training. The current theme highlights the problems of actualization of professional education and forming new competitive specialists.